With a rich history and a vibrant present, Parsons Green is a place with plenty for everyone to enjoy

Parsons Green is a rare blend of city living that retains a touch of historic village charm. The area boasts a central triangular green, welcoming community, and a rich history that has made it a favourite among families, professionals, and visitors alike. It is located just 15 minutes by tube to Victoria.

Dating from medieval times, the area is named for the village green that formed the focal point of local gatherings. By the 19th century, it had evolved from a farming outpost to a fashionable suburb for Londoners. Remnants of the past can still be seen in the period townhouses of the area, street names, park names, and Fulham Palace; the historical residence of the Bishops of London.

'The Green' still forms the central core of Parsons Green, flanked by attractive

Georgian and Victorian houses, and three central and popular pubs – The Duke on The Green, Aragon House and The White Horse – affectionately known as 'The Sloaney Pony'. Aragon House is the site of a dower house belonging to Queen Catherine of Aragon, the first of Henry VIII's six wives.

Throughout the year, the green hosts events such as the Parsons Green Fair, which brings the community together with stalls, entertainment and activities. Parsons Green boasts a vibrant culinary scene: local favourites include Koji, Vicino, Nuovi Saponi and, of course, the legendary Kebab Kid. There is an array of independent shops and cafés that cater for all tastes.

Socially, there is lots to offer, from Andrew Robson's Bridge Club to the exclusive Hurlingham Club. Rowers can take advantage of the Thames from Putney Embankment, and Bishops Park has a weekly 5k Parkrun. Nearby Eel Brook Common and South Park provide areas for outdoor activities, while local clubs and fitness studios cater to active lifestyles. For cyclists and walkers, the Thames Path is just a stone's throw away, offering scenic routes along the river.

The area's strong appeal to families is bolstered by its excellent schools. Lady Margaret School is a standout option, being an Ofsted 'outstanding' girls' secondary school, alongside other well-rated primary and secondary schools in the vicinity. Parsons Green Prep, Kensington Prep and the Lycée are equally sought-after options. With safe streets, alongside abundant green
